Interoperability involves standards and technologies working together to allow easy access to heterogeneous, distributed data and services.